

APBS Event Emergency and Inclement Weather Policy

Sponsored APBS events, including but not limited to the APBS Annual International Conference on Positive Behavior Support, may be canceled under extraordinary circumstances that are outside of the control of the organization. Cancellation may occur 1) due to inclement weather or other unforeseeable events (including, but not limited to, flood, fire, other natural disasters or events threatening the safety of conference attendees, facilitators, and vendors including acts of terrorism) or 2) in the event that the venue and/or location of the event is closed or provides notice to APBS of its inability to hold the event inclusive, but not limited to the instance that government officials proclaim a local state of emergency that encompasses the location of the event.

In the event that an APBS national and/or international event is canceled due to the above noted reasons, a reasonable attempt will be made by APBS to reschedule the event with paid registration fees applied to the rescheduled event. If APBS is unable to reschedule the event or if a conference registrant is unable to attend the rescheduled date established by APBS, the registration fee will be refunded in full. However, all travel expenses that may have been incurred by APBS event registrants are the responsibility of the registrants, and thus, will not be reimbursed by APBS (including the situation where the APBS event is held as originally scheduled, however the weather conditions (forecasted or actualized) prohibit conference registrants from traveling to the scheduled event despite the fact that the APBS has not been cancelled). Further, if the event is held, but weather conditions prohibit your safe travel so you are unable to attend, we unfortunately cannot refund your registration fee.
